Coffelt Housing Rehabilitation Update (19th Ave - South of Buckeye Road)

Construction continues in full force at Coffelt-Lamoreaux apartment homes with 25% of the project complete.

136 families are scheduled to move into the newly remodeled homes on November 15, 2016. After that, a continuous stream of homes will be occupied every month until completion anticipated in June, 2017.

Monthly update meetings will be held with residents starting this month to answer any questions or address any concerns of safety by residents or students during construction and move-ins.

Artists Jose Benavidez and Martin Moreno have begun designing medallions with Hamilton students. The medallions will be repurposed metal from the Coffelt construction site and used as landmarks throughout 38 acre property.

Concrete from the construction site will also be repurposed into benches that will be used throughout the project.

A sculpture entitled “Spirit of Revival” is being created for the Coffelt project also from repurposed materials and will commemorate the extensive revitalization that will transform the Coffelt community.

Ongoing partnerships with various service providers are being formalized.

A recent meeting with the new Principal and Superintendent and staff for Hamilton School has occurred renewing the ongoing partnership.

Si Se Puede, a nonprofit will begin STEM Robotics classes, as well as, ballet folklórico classes for the students at Hamilton and Coffelt. More to come!

The second Hip Hop at the Park Event was a success at Eastlake Park on Friday September 9, 2016. Over 120 dancers, youth and family members came to support the great talent we saw. A great collaboration between DJ Tranzo, City of Phoenix Parks & Recreation Department, DJ Panic, VProlific & Phoenician Urban Wear. Thank you to all those who sponsor and support our youth and yes.... THEY ROCKETED IT!

Encouraging pretend play in young children builds their brains

Phoenix (9/19) – This time of year, stores are filled with seasonal costumes and children excitedly transforming into their favorite superhero or cartoon character.

For young children, the type of play associated with dressing up and pretending to be someone else is an integral part of learning.

“Did you ever stop to watch toddlers or preschoolers imagining themselves as princesses and pirates?” said Ginger Sandweg, First Things First Senior Director for Early Learning. “When children play, they draw on all their past experiences – things they have done, seen others do, or heard stories about – and use those to develop their own situations, stories and scenarios. And they are learning in the process.”

According to the LEGO Foundation, whose mission is to make children’s lives better and communities stronger by making sure the fundamental value of play is understood, embraced and acted upon, there are different types of play. All which support an aspect of physical, intellectual and social-emotional growth.

Socio-dramatic play is easy to spot. Watch a child dress up and pretend he is someone or something else, for example, pretending to be a firefighter or a dog. Researchers say this is the basis of children’s developing social understanding.

In fact, research has shown that play impacts everything from physical abilities and vocabulary to problem solving, creativity, teamwork and empathy.

Across the county, First Things First offers family resource centers where parents and caregivers can learn how to incorporate play in their daily lives. To learn more, visit www.familyresourceaz.org.

First Things First encourages families to stay active through play, since it is one of the most important ways that young kids learn. So, how do parents recognize play and encourage it in our children? Here are a few guidelines:

- Play is FUN.
- Play doesn’t start out with a specific goal – like learning letters or numbers.
- Play is spontaneous and voluntary.
- In play, everyone is actively involved.
- And, finally, play includes an element of make believe.

To encourage play, caregivers can:

- Advocate for play – open your home and schedule time for play. Re-evaluate your child’s schedule to make sure there are plenty of opportunities and time for play.
- Provide the resources for stimulating play – not necessarily toys, just plenty of varied objects visible to children. Then, let their creativity take over.
- Join in the fun, but let your child take the lead. You may think you look silly, but you are expanding your child’s learning.
- Encourage your child to use his imagination.

Parents and caregivers can help children reach their full potential. It starts with embracing the huge value that play has in helping children learn critical skills that are essential for their future.

About First Things First – First Things First is a voter-created, statewide organization that funds early education and health programs to help kids be successful once they enter kindergarten. Decisions about how those funds are spent are made by local councils staffed by community volunteers. To learn more, visit FirstThingsFirst.org.
Flight Delays Are Possible During Peak Hours
Special To Central City South

If you’re traveling in or out of Phoenix Sky Harbor soon, please be aware that the airport will close its north runway (Runway 8/26) Thursday Oct. 6 – Sunday Nov. 6 for several construction and maintenance projects. This closure may mean flight delays for some passengers.

What do travelers need to know?
The north runway is one of three at Phoenix Sky Harbor. Arrival and departure delays of up to 30 minutes are possible during peak travel times: 7:30 a.m. – 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. – 8 p.m. Passengers who have tight connections should contact their airline if they are concerned about having enough time to transfer between flights. Additionally, passengers and those picking up passengers should check flight status with their airline before coming to the airport.

What projects are requiring this closure?
The primary reason for the closure is to run additional power from an Arizona Public Service substation north of the Airport all the way to Terminal 3. Workers will need to remove concrete from the north runway, install a duct bank, and then re-pave that section of runway. This is necessary for the Terminal 3 modernization project, which will provide a more efficient and consolidated security checkpoint, more space for passengers and state-of-the-art technology systems.

While the runway is closed for that project, the Airport will conduct additional maintenance such as: replacing concrete on the sections of runway where most landings occur; upgrading lighting to LED; striping and pavement maintenance.

The project is being funded with Airport revenue. No tax dollars are used to operate or maintain Phoenix Sky Harbor International Airport.

Other information
Because of the closure of the north runway, air traffic will be concentrated on the Airport’s two south runways. Residents living directly east and west of the airport’s center and south runways may notice increased activity on certain flight paths during these 31 days.

The north runway is 11,490 feet long and 150 feet wide. It is the airport’s longest runway.

For more information, including updates on the project, please visit skyharbor.com
Sun Sounds of Arizona is a not-for-profit service that creatively applies technology and talent to make sure every person with a print disability can access the current and local information they need to live a self-directed, productive life.

“I can travel all over the world and never have any anxiety about flight delays, lost luggage, or threats of terror attacks. I’m ready to fly to the moon. My sense of security all stems from the fact that the “printed word” is delivered directly to me through a Sun Sounds of Arizona radio.” — Eleanor Kleinberg of Scottsdale

49,000 listeners from a pool of 403,889 eligible Arizonans

When someone loses their ability to see or handle print material, they can no longer read printed materials like books, newspapers, or even grocery store ads. Lifelong readers are forced to change their routines and find new ways to connect to the world.

People with normal vision also struggle to read magazines and books because of medical conditions like arthritis and dyslexia. Some find it painful to turn newspaper pages, while others find it impossible to hold a magazine at eye level.

Every physical disability poses its own set of challenges. But in our highly visual culture, being prevented from reading print removes a vital link to the world around us.

We meet this challenge through our reading and information service, Sun Sounds of Arizona. Broadcast via public radio stations’ subcarrier waves, on-line, and through the telephone, our team of volunteers read aloud from local and national newspapers, magazines, and even local ads and catalogs.

How Sun Sounds Listeners Tune In

We provide special radios that can pick up the Sun Sounds subcarrier at no charge to listeners.

Assisted-living facilities, senior communities, & hospitals broadcast Sun Sounds on bedside televisions.

On our website, listeners can hear the live feed and download individual shows on demand.

Phoenix-area listeners with an HD radio can also hear Sun Sounds on K-BACH 89.5’s HD-3 channel.

The Sun Dial II service lets listeners phone in to the live Sun Sounds broadcast or an archived program.

The free iBlink mobile app brings Sun Sounds access directly to the convenience of a smartphone.

“"We recently replaced a worn-out radio for one of our long-time listeners in Green Valley. When she called in to get a replacement one, she told us, “When my old radio went out, I never missed anything so much! Listening to Sun Sounds programs is so much better than listening to the news.”"

THE TRUTH ABOUT ELECTRICITY MAY SHOCK YOU

APS encourages safety during summer storms, dispels common “myths” about electricity

PHOENIX – During an Arizona summer, monsoon storms can bring high winds and microbursts that have historically delivered enough force to knock power lines and poles to the ground. Last week during a storm in New Jersey, a woman unfortunately was killed when she attempted to get out of her vehicle after power lines fell onto her car. Safety is the number one priority, and APS wants to ensure customers are aware of important safety practices during monsoon season.

To help our customers and others stay safe through summer storm season, we offer the top eight misconceptions surrounding downed power line safety:

1) Auto tires protect against electrical shock… FALSE: Electricity has one goal - find the least-resistant path to ground. If a line falls on your car, the electricity from the line can travel through the body of the car, through the tires and to the ground. If you exit the vehicle, you could get electrocuted if you’re touching the car and the ground at the same time.

2) Because metal is a conductor, it is safer outside the car…FALSE: In the case of a downed line, the safest place is inside your car. If you have a cell phone, call 911 and wait patiently for help to arrive. If you must get out of the car because of a life-threatening situation, jump away from the vehicle using the baseboard of the vehicle without touching both the vehicle and the ground at the same time. Move away using short, shuffle steps without lifting your feet off the ground until you are at least 100 feet away from the vehicle.

3) Live wires always make sparks…FALSE: Always assume a wire is live. Many downed wires do not spark, make noise, or show any indication of electricity. Just because a wire is down does not mean that electricity is shut off.

4) APS always knows when a line is down…FALSE: If you see a downed line, immediately call 911 and then APS’s call center at (602) 371-7171.

5) A power line can only cause harm if touched…FALSE: Anything touching a power line could become energized and you could be harmed if you touch what has become energized. Additionally, electricity can spread through the ground if conditions, like moisture, allow it. Just because you are not touching a line doesn’t mean you are safe from the electricity in the line. Even though you can’t see it, it doesn't mean it can’t injure you.

6) All power lines are insulated…FALSE: Unlike extension cords or wires that connect many household appliances, overhead power lines do not have insulation. Touching one, directly or indirectly, is dangerous and can cause serious injury, including death.

7) Wood is an insulator…FALSE: Although wood is typically thought of as an insulator, it can conduct electricity, especially if it is wet or moist. Using wood to touch or move a downed power line is dangerous and absolutely should not be attempted.

8) Rubber shoes are good insulation…FALSE: Although rubber is commonly used as an insulator, most “rubber” accessories such as gloves or shoes are not rated for direct contact with electricity. It is not safe to touch any energized material (power line or anything touching a power line) just because you are wearing rubber gloves or rubber shoes.

APS serves about 2.7 million people in 11 of Arizona’s 15 counties, and is the Southwest’s foremost producer of clean safe and reliable electricity. Using a balanced energy mix that is nearly 50 percent carbon-free, APS has one of the country’s most substantial renewable energy portfolios, and owns and operates the Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station, the country’s top power producer and largest producer of carbon-free energy. The company is also a proven leader in introducing technology and services that offer customers choice and control over their energy consumption. With headquarters in Phoenix, APS is the principal subsidiary of Pinnacle West Capital Corp. (NYSE: PNW).
APS seeks to expand support to limited-income customers
By Michelle Gettinger, Community Affairs Manager, APS

You may have heard that APS has recently filed a request with the Arizona Corporation Commission for a rate review. However, what you probably haven’t heard is that within our proposal, our commitment to easing the cost of electricity for limited-income customers is increasing dramatically.

Our proposal establishes a simple, flat monthly discount of $34 (up to 80 percent of the customer’s bill) and seeks a $12 million expansion of current program support, to total $48 million.

The proposal has support from some champions for the limited-income community, including George Dean, President and CEO of the Greater Phoenix Urban League:

“APS offers significant help to people with limited incomes who sometimes must choose between putting food on the table, paying electric bills or buying clothes. The increased program support they’re proposing would make a huge difference in the lives of many Arizonans” – George Dean

Eva Olivas, Executive Director/CEO of Phoenix Revitalization Corporation stated “I am always excited to see proposals that include new or expanded resources for those families in great need”.

APS also wants to make it easier for eligible customers to enroll in the limited-income support program. According to our Chief Customer Officer Stacy Derstine, we currently have about 85,000 customers who receive assistance. Stacey Derstine said, “We know more people qualify for discounts, and we want to ensure those who meet the requirements are aware of the help they can get.”

For more information on APS’s rate review proposal and rate plan offerings, visit AZEnergyFuture.com. You can also reach out to me via email at Michelle.Gettinger@aps.com.

The Arizona Fair Housing Center (AFHC) is a private non-profit, civil rights advocacy organization. Its mission is to eliminate housing discrimination. It receives its funding from U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The Arizona Fair Housing Center has served Arizona residents for over 20 years by providing fair housing presentations/workshops, outreach, enforcement and referral services. The Center takes all appropriate action in ensuring equal housing opportunities for all. To achieve our goal, the AFHC engages in activities designed to encourage fair housing practices through education and outreach in the community, and assist persons who believe they have been victims of housing discrimination.

Fair Housing is not an option, it is the Law! Federal, state and local fair housing laws prohibit discrimination based on race, color, national origin, religion, sex, familial status (families with children under 18 years of age or pregnancy), and disability (physical and/or mental)

Signs of Housing Discrimination:
- Refusing to sell, rent, or show available housing
- Harassment or intimidation
- Housing advertisement with discriminatory statements or displaying no minorities in group scenes
- Extensive questioning prior to offering or providing information about the availability of housing
- Being told the dwelling is not appropriate for your family
- Dwelling has an available sign but you are told it is not available
- Refusing to make a reasonable accommodation or allow a modification to make the dwelling accessible for a person with a disability

If You Believe that You or Someone You Know Has Been Discriminated Against:
- Record the experience, write down names of individuals, companies, addresses, phone numbers, dates, times and witnesses involved.
- Keep copies of advertising, letters or other relevant information.
- If you know a person of the opposite sex, or different race, etc., who received a different answer than you did, make a note of their name and address.

One of my favorite duties as a member of Congress is the privilege of nominating students to attend our nation’s military service academies.

As a veteran, I take great pride in our armed forces, and I love to see young adults who want to serve our nation in uniform.

Service academies offer prestigious & unique academic, career, and military leadership opportunities.

If you or someone you know wish to apply to attend a U.S. service academy, you must seek a nomination from your member of Congress.

To learn more about this process, please visit https://rubengallego.house.gov/services/military-academy-nominations.

I want to hear from you!

As always, my office is here to help you. Please call us at 602-256-0551 and let us know how we can serve you.

Follow me on Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and YouTube to stay informed about what I’m doing in Congress and get a behind the scenes look at my day-to-day in Washington.

Very truly yours,
Congressman Ruben Gallego
